THE PACIFIC COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER.

Saturday, June 21, 1884.

Editorial Articles.

FROM THE DAILY P. C. A.

A MALICIOUS MISREPRESENTATION.

The Hawaiian and Bulletin of Saturday took upon themselves to misrepresent in the most infamous manner the utterances of the ADVERTISER in regard to the gentlemen who attended the Lyceum meeting. They have assumed that our objection to a speech delivered at that meeting was a defense of the Bank Charter, as well as an aspersion of the character of the citizens who took part in the discussion. We asserted that Mr. Nott, though a worthy and intelligent mechanic, was not the proper person to act as Chairman of a meeting while a subject of great financial and commercial importance was before the community. We intended no reflection upon Mr. Nott when we declared that Mr. J. O. Carter, Mr. A. J. Cartwright, or Mr. W. L. Green would have been a wiser selection. We assumed that Mr. Nott was chosen with the purpose of throwing a bait to the workmen, and making the Bank Charter a political matter when it should be kept apart from political sentiment, and be considered by both parties, irrespective altogether of partisan feeling.

For this we have been arraigned on the charge of denouncing the meeting as an assemblage of demagogues. The object of our contemporaries is plainly defined. They will have the Bank Charter a political matter. They insist upon making it the motive for a political agitation, a workmen's movement, so to speak, in which soreheads are to have the leadership. They are determined to pervert our utterances, and with the most shame-faced audacity assume and attack sentiments which have never appeared in the columns of this paper. That we are not alone in our criticism of the spirit of one of the speeches delivered in the Lyceum, the following extract from the Saturday Press will show:—

"There was one speech of distinctly vicious 'sand lot' demagogism which no reasonable man ought to endorse—the speech of Mr. Ashford. We do not assume that the speaker was either insincere or designedly incendiary; but his speech carried the effect of being both. It was certainly 'injurious.' That we need not call it by a harsher term the speaker may thank Mr. Isenberg, whose manly and thoroughly sensible speech gauged the temper of the meeting exactly; it meant to be firm; it meant to be united; but it meant also to keep within the law. That is what we all want. When the law fails us—and not till then—incendiary talkers may be needed in this fight. But we think, even then, that Kearneyism is not the sort of leadership we need."

We have said nothing more; but the Bulletin will have that we have wantonly attacked the gentlemen whose names are appended to the resolution calling the Lyceum meeting. Again we repeat that our criticism has been confined to the incendiary character of Mr. Ashford's speech, not to the meeting, not to the object for which the meeting was called, and not to the tone of the other speeches which were in the main conservative.

We, in conjunction with this community at large, are opposed to monopoly of any kind, no matter by whom proposed, or no matter in what guise it is placed before the public. We are not in any way an advocate of the Bank Charter, and we denounce the attempts of those journals to pervert our plainly-stated position, as grossly mendacious, and inexcusably malicious. We want no exclusive franchise, and will spare no effort to defeat any attempt to obtain one.

The attempt of one journal whose proprietor is unknown, whose editor is unknown, and who, under this cover of irresponsibility, assaults this journal with falsehoods of the most manifest character, we shall not notice in the future. They are unworthy of attention, and we owe our readers an apology for giving them the importance of a refutation. But we shall continue to counsel moderation and conservatism in the public discussion of the Bank Charter. We repeat that this community is passing through a critical period when everything approaching a working men's agitation should be avoided. In this we are in accord with the best elements of this community. We are in accord with the majority of the gentlemen who attended the Lyceum meeting; and we are in accord with every principle of good government. The Bank Charter must not be made a political question, and the men or newspapers who would make it one shall be exposed and denounced by this journal.

SOME of the awards at the Agricultural Show are open to criticism. This is particularly the case in regard to Mr. Cornwell's thoroughbred stallion "Waterford." The horse was entered in the thoroughbred class, but was passed over for "Langford, Jr.," which obtained the first prize. Now as a matter of fact, "Waterford" is the only thoroughbred horse in this island, while "Langford, Jr.," is not five-eighths thoroughbred. Yet in the face of this, "Langford, Jr.," was awarded the prize and "Waterford" was judged to be "the best saddle horse." To this "Waterford's" owner very properly objected, and declared that as his horse did not obtain the prize in the class in which he was entered, he would accept no compromise award. There is nothing more calculated to discourage exhibitors than this sort of business, and its inevitable result will be the discontinuance of these exhibitions. Mr. Cornwell has written to J. Cairn Simpson, editor of the Breeder and Sportsman, on the question, and his reply will appear in these columns.

CONSUL-GENERAL ANDREWS, of Rio Janeiro, in a recent report discussing the subject of a reciprocity treaty with Brazil, says:—"For example, our treaty with the Sandwich Islands has resulted in a revision of their tariff, by which protective duties have been levied upon all European products and manufactures. This was a necessary sequence, in order to conform to the spirit of the reciprocal engagements, under the treaty. Nor was this the most important advantage gained to the United States by the treaty. It threw nearly the whole commercial exchanges with the Islands into our hands; it greatly enlarged their buying capacity by stimulating their capacity for production; and it also threw nearly all their carrying trade into our hands, and created such a demand upon our shipyards upon the Pacific Coast as to promise the most gratifying increase of our carrying trade and our shipbuilding industries throughout the whole coast line, east and west, from the extension of the policy of reciprocity to other countries on this side of the Atlantic."

FROM England we learn that the dynamiters are still at work, and selected a no less important place than Scotland Yard for the field of their operations. The telegram states that "An explosion of dynamite occurred outside the detective office at Scotland Yard, on the night of 30th May. Beside blowing away a part of the main building, a brougham standing opposite the point of the explosion was wrecked, and the coachman injured. Several policemen were injured by cuts from glass, which flew in all directions. Thirteen persons were injured, including five women. Five of them, including a policeman, are in a precarious condition. It is rumored that four of the dynamiters have been captured."

THE exposure of the Hawaiian's Chinese relations was a fearful shock to the feelings of our polyglot contemporary. It can never talk working men's rights again. The Chinese and the workingman are oil and water. They will not mix, and even the Anglo-American-Chino Hawaiian is not equal to this chemical task. We are sorry that this bulwark of American interests is so fearfully flabbergasted. It read last evening as if a pile-driver had struck it. Yet this sidewinder which knocked the Hawaiian silly was only an iteration of the simple fact that its stock is in the hands of the Chinese. How the Mongolian was led to invest may form the subject of another article.

THE Bulletin asks, Is Mr. A. S. Hartwell to be denounced as a low-lived demagogue, or Mr. Carter as a blatherskite? assuming that the ADVERTISER so characterized those gentlemen. Of course this is a falsehood. In the first place, the term low-lived demagogue never appeared in these columns; and in the second place, the ADVERTISER has always regarded Mr. Carter as one of the representative men of the community, and was his warm advocate at the last election.

THE Hawaiian on Saturday apologizes for the editor of this journal on the ground that he is "a new comer." We acknowledge the compliment from the editor of our contemporary who, during a residence of 60 days, has grown old in his knowledge of Hawaiian affairs. We don't mind being called a new-comer if the reproach proceeds from one who can date his island residence back to at least six months. But here we draw the line. We cannot endure this contumely from any sixty-day native of this kingdom.

THE Hawaiian has no employer, for it is a joint stock company, incorporated and having a charter, which the ADVERTISER, in its rickety career, has so far never obtained.—Saturday Hawaiian.

We imagine the list of the Hawaiian shareholders would be interesting reading. We venture to say that the Hawaiian would not, under any circumstances, inform the public in whose hands its stock rests.

THE P.M.S.S. Australia arrived at 11 A.M. on Saturday last, and left again at 3 P.M. She brought dates to the 7th instant. The most important news item is the nomination of Blaine and Logan by the Republican Convention for President and Vice-President of the United States. The S. F. Merchant sent down an extra, extolling the situation and congratulating the Islands on the prospect.

THOUGH there are a number of handsome churches in Honolulu which are well attended, there is unfortunately, as yet, no brewery. This is a matter in which all good Christians, missionary and non-missionary should interest themselves.

AGAIN the French papers are exulting over a stroke of enterprise. The man of the Monde dressed himself in the blouse and slouched hat of a day laborer, and got one of his artist friends to hire him to carry his picture to the salon for the purpose of hanging it. When inside the building, with his face carefully concealed by his hat, the critic made a tour of the galleries, carefully making mental notes, and the next day published a three-column account of the exhibition. The San Francisco reporters are also keen fellows. At a fashionable wedding in that city not long since, a reporter, resolving to have a more complete account of the ceremony than his rival, obtained access to the bridal chamber, and crawled under the bed. When the bride, who always made a point of looking under the bed before retiring, saw the gas-light reflected from the glossy metallic surface of the reporter's cheek, there was a huge row. The ambitious journalist was yanked out by the groom, and lustily hammered before he had time to produce his credentials. And to make matters worse, when he proudly related his experience to the proprietor of the paper, that unappreciative tyrant gruffly remarked that if he had been in the groom's place, he would have kicked his head off.

THERE is an awful story current regarding the judges of dogs at the Agricultural Show. The tale runs that just before these courtly gentlemen and just judges made their rounds, some mischievous fellow, who had no confidence in their dog knowledge, snatched a stray and nameless dog from the road, flung it into a vacant kennel, and labelled it with a high sounding card. And furthermore that when the judges beheld this vagabond dog, they were struck with admiration, and awarded it the first prize. Of course we do not vouch for the authenticity of this narrative, but judging from some of the awards, there is a possibility that it might have been.

WE are informed that the report of the French savants who have been trying the grand pig experiment in Paris will be published shortly. Those doctors have kept nine pigs in a state of perpetual drunkenness for as many weeks. Pigs were chosen for the experiment because of the close resemblance of their digestive organs to those of men. There are some of the latter who would not object to submitting themselves to a series of these experiments. And the man who is in the habit of making a hog of himself would glory in having for once, science apologize for bestiality.

THOUGH Ben. Butler is discussed by some of the Coast papers as the possible nominee of the Democratic Convention, the chances are altogether against such an unwise selection. Butler's conversion to Democracy is too modern. The old Bourbons would never vote for him, and would launch the paternal curse at their offspring should they presume to cast a Butler ballot. They have not forgotten New Orleans. Moreover, the strongest man they could put against Blaine would be Tilden. And we have little doubt but he will be their choice.

WE publish this morning the full report of the Finance Committee thus giving every reader of this paper the advantage of perusing this document. It is the intention of the ADVERTISER to ever keep ahead of its contemporaries in laying before the public everything of importance that takes place in this Kingdom. We shall spare no expense to sustain the reputation of this journal as the most enterprising, the fairest, and the most public-spirited newspaper of these islands.
